

... as if they were real.

...oh, sole mio...

Don't people expect to see real and original things when they visit museums? Of course, the exhibits are unique, their presentation excellent. But the figures often leave a lot to be desired.

A slick shopwindow dummy is simply not enough. What you need are lifelike, authentic figures. People who speak or actually make music. Animals that make authentic noises. Difficult? No, because that has been our craft for over one hundred years.

Horses, cows, dogs, cats, hens ... you can have a complete set of farmyard animals if you like.

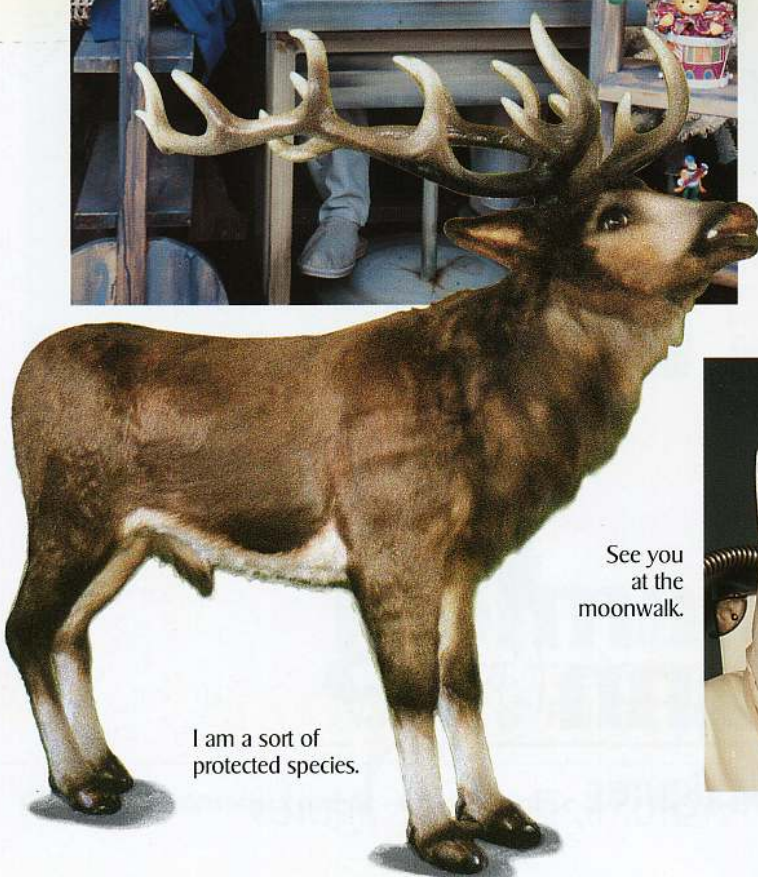

Over 150 years ago, data was still recorded at a desk.

The perilous tiger's tooth.

The Professor revels in talking about his latest discoveries.

See you at the moonwalk.

I am a sort of protected species.

